1. Two-day Webinar on “Chonde Kothay Jiboner Rong-Berong” (The Many Hues of Life: Words in Rhythm and Rhyme)

Brochure Link: <https://agc.ac.in/PDF/notice02092020.pdf>

Date: 12.09.2020- 13.09.2020

Time: 4 p.m.

Organizer: IQAC and Dept. of Bengali

Number of Participants: 700

Speakers: . Pracheta Gupta, Eminent Writer and Journalist

Khandakar Mahmudul Hassan, Eminent Writer and Researcher of Bangladesh

Ramkumar Mukhopadhyay, Eminent Writer

Pablo Sahi, Eminent Poet, Artist, Professor and Researcher of Bangladesh

Objectives:

- To capture the life and literature of undivided Bengal
- To give a taste to the participants of the very essence of life as is revealed in various colours and shades

Programme Outcomes:

- Literature takes its sustenance from life; it is life in its many hues and shades that it seeks to portray. These myriad colours of life have always been a part of our literary tradition, a tradition that is a patchwork of diverse beliefs, rituals and customs. It is this eclectic mix that has enriched our collective existence and made us experience life in diverse forms. Hence the webinar attempted to capture this very essence of life as is revealed in various colours; colours that are not mere figments of imagination but are actually the colours that encompass the various aspects of life.

- The Life and Literature of Undivided Bengal in its multifaceted forms was presented to us by our eminent speakers from both sides of Bengal as well as our participants, at the same time we caught a glimpse of customs and cultures of other parts of South Asia as well, for it is difficult to confine creativity to the rigid space of geography. No culture or language can live for long if it dissociates itself from others; dialogues and interactions among different groups are essential to enhance the vivacity of any language or culture. It was our humble attempt to encourage these interchanges through this webinar.

2. Steering the Course of Post Colonial Life in Bengal: Women in Politics and Play

Brochure:

Date: 26.09.2020

Time: 3 p.m.

Organizer: Department of History in collaboration with the IQAC, Asansol Girls' College

Number of participants: 397

Speakers: Dr. Nabanita Dutta, Associate Professor, Department of History, Nistarini College & Dr. Amrita Mitra, SACT, Department of History, Raniganj Girls' College

Objectives:

- To make the students understand that nothing can stop them to achieve their dreams by demonstrating how women's participation in politics and play defied all stereotypes.
- To instil in them a hope and aspirations to realise their goals.

Programme Outcomes:

- The speakers are alumni of this very institution and it became all the more befitting as they chose to speak on this subject. It was for the first time that the alumni of Asansol Girls' College came as resource persons in such an online platform organised by the Department of History.
- As representatives of modern Indian women, who have to constantly wade their course through the various challenges of life, it became all the more relevant when they spoke in length about the ordeals that women have been facing, particularly since the post-colonial times. Be it politics or play, on which our two speakers elucidated, women were encumbered with too much pressure, but despite that they steered their course through the rough waters and managed to leave their imprint on society.

- The programme left a lasting impact on the audience, who though were mostly made up of our current students and alumni also included participants from across the globe. The webinar's outcome lay in its wide appeal .
- Our students could identify themselves with our esteemed speakers who had once studied here; this actually instilled in them the hope and aspiration to achieve their dreams. These alumni greatly acted as a source of encouragement for our students, since they were indeed the live examples to our students for the way this institution had nurtured them and led their way to success.
- Though apparently the arenas chosen by our two speakers, politics and play, are conventionally considered to be a man's domain, their talks were all about how women dared to defy these stereotypes, this actually made the audience especially our students probe into this further, making them think out of box in their future choice of careers. The webinar had intended the students to understand that there is actually no natural demarcation between a man's and a woman's world , all that exists is a societal imposition and it can be said that this webinar has been successful in this endeavour.

Number of participants - 72

Presenters : Chandrani Chatterjee, Shubhanwita Ray, Arshita Roy, ShahreenJawain, LubnaRahmat, Sarbjeet Kaur, Srijita Ghosh

Objective:

The Department of English, Asansol Girls' College, in keeping with the spirit of the internationally celebrated literary event Bloomsday commemorates the works of James Joyce keeping in mind his short stories, which were a part of their prescribed syllabus on 16th June, 2020. The department organised a Students' Webinar on "James Joyce and the Irish Literary Scene". The participants presented various papers on the subject. Chandrani Chatterjee of semester V presented a paper on "Dublin in Joyce: A Case Study of Dubliners" and was awarded the best paper of the event.

Outcome:

During the pandemic causing strictures in learning, this webinar was a welcome method of involvement for the students. Many students participated speaking on a variety of subjects including Irish Music, Theatre, and geography that influenced Joyce's writing. It was a highly interactive session. For some of the students this was an introduction to the beginnings of Research Methodologies. They learned how to write an academic article. This webinar enhanced their understanding of the modern era, the contemporary socio-political scenario in Ireland and encouraged to draw some similarities with the then Indian situation. This seminar also enhanced their critical acumen on Modern Art and Literature giving them a holistic idea about the era.

Objectives:

The Department of English, Asansol Girls' College in collaboration with The Department of History, Asansol Girls' College staged a seminar keeping in mind the crucial significance of the Partition within the history of India and Khuswant Singh's seminal text "Train to Pakistan" within the syllabus. Two teachers from the Department of History presented their papers with utmost sincerity keeping in mind the requirements of the students. Two teachers from the Department of English spoke on the subject to broaden the horizon of the students. It was a three-hour long session with a special question - answer section for the benefit of the students.

Outcome:

The seminar opened up new vistas for the students within the context of various discourses regarding the Indian Partition. It helped them understand the socio-political-economic background for the literary texts they were assigned. A solid base was the aim and at the end of the seminar, it stood fulfilled. The question-answer session was extremely fruitful and a large number of students expressed their curiosity. Partition Literature being a part of the syllabus, this seminar helped the students to clear their doubts.
